

Chapter 3

Analyzing Financing Activities

QUESTIONS

1. Financial statements are prepared with either liabilities or equity or both liabilities and financing obligations that require future payments of money, liabilities, or other assets. They are companies' claims against a company's present and future assets and resources. Liabilities can be either financing or operating in nature and are usually either liabilities of equity holders. Financial liabilities are all forms of debt financing such as long-term notes and bonds and commercial borrowings. Long-term liabilities are considerable financial liability obligations. Liabilities are obligations that concern operating assets or other resources and non-financial obligations. In contrast, equity reflects the claims of owners on the net assets of a company. Claims of owners are given as evidence, meaning they are residual claims on all assets after claims of liabilities are satisfied. Equity holders are entitled to the residual net assets with a company but also are entitled to all residual benefits of a company. Various other securities, such as convertible bonds, provide the firm reporting liabilities and equity and represent a hybrid form of financing.
2. Operating liabilities arise in the normal course of operations for a particular business. Examples of operating liabilities include accounts payable, notes payable, interest payable, and other amounts of operating liabilities, such as wages payable. In contrast, financing liabilities arise from financing activities. Examples of financing liabilities include short and long-term borrowings and notes payable.
3. The major forms of financing liabilities are private and public debt and capital stock issues. Private debt includes all loans that are taken from private sources to finance business operations. Public debt includes all loans directly from investors for financing activities, usually in the form of bonds. Both public and private debt may be short or long term in nature and include various contractual provisions, such as fixed payments, liabilities and securities for the firm. Loans are not businesses and long-term financing liabilities are not liabilities to the firm but are securities.
4. Stock securities and dividends are also where the company takes on the long-term debt. Stock is a financial asset for the firm, which is the effective capital stock. It is a security where the effective interest rate is the company's cost of capital. Stock is a financial asset to the firm, which is the effective interest rate. It is a security where the effective interest rate is the company's cost of capital. Stock is a financial asset to the firm, which is the effective interest rate.
