Amazonian Floodplain Forests Wolfgang J. Junk, Maria T. F. Piedade, Florian Wittmann, Jochen Schöngart, Pia Parolin, 2010-09-27 Central Amazonian floodplain forests are a unique and endangered ecosystem The forests grow in areas that are annually flooded by large rivers during mean periods of up to 8 months and at depths of up to 10 m Despite this severe stress these forests consist of over 1 000 species and are by far the most species rich floodplain forests worldwide The trees show a broad range of morphological anatomical physiological and phenological adaptations that enable them not only to survive the adverse environmental conditions but also to produce large amounts of biomass when the nutrient levels in water and soils are sufficiently high This is the case in the floodplains of white water rivers which are used for fisheries agriculture and cattle ranching but which also have a high potential for the production of timber and non timber products when adequately managed Latest research on ecophysiology gives insight how tree species adapt to the oscillating flood pulse focusing on their photosynthesis respiration sap flow biochemistry phenology wood and leaf anatomy root morphology and functioning fruit chemistry seed germination seedling establishment nitrogen fixation and genetic variability Based on tree ages lifetime growth rates and net primary production new concepts are developed to improve the sustainability of traditional forest managements in the background of an integrated natural resource management This is the first integrative book on the functioning and ecologically oriented use of floodplain forests in the tropics and sub tropics It provides fundamental knowledge for scientist students foresters and other professionals on their distribution evolution and phytogeography This book is an excellent testimony to the interdisciplinary collaboration of a group of very dedicated scientists to unravel the functioning of the Amazonian Floodplain forests They have brought together a highly valuable contribution on the distribution ecology primary production ecophysiology typology biodiversity and human use of these forests offering recommendations for sustainable management and future projects in enormous human and economic investment in these activities it is essential to know more about them and to understand the advantages and disadvantages for host communities Most people assume that poor communities benefit from the goodwill and skills of the volunteers Volunteer trips are widely advertised as a means to give back and make a difference In contrast some claim that health volunteering is a new form of colonialism designed to benefit the volunteers more than the host communities Others focus on unethical practices and potential harm to the presumed beneficiaries Judith N Lasker evaluates these opposing positions and relies on extensive research interviews with host country staff members sponsor organization leaders and volunteers a national survey of sponsors and participant observation to identify best and worst practices She adds to the debate a focus on the benefits to the sponsoring organizations benefits that can contribute to practices that are inconsistent with what host country staff identify as most likely to be useful for them and even with what may enhance the experience for volunteers Hoping to Help illuminates the activities and goals of sponsoring organizations and compares dominant practices to the preferences of host country staff and to nine principles for most effective volunteer trips
