Brand New Justice Simon Anholt, 2006-08-11 Recently vilified as the prime dynamic driving home the breach between poor and rich nations here the branding process is rehabilitated as a potential saviour of the economically underprivileged Brand New Justice now in a revised paperback edition systematically analyses the success stories of the Top Thirteen nations demonstrating that their wealth is based on the last mile of the commercial process buying raw materials and manufacturing cheaply in third world countries these countries realise their lucrative profits by adding value through finishing packaging and marketing and then selling the branded product on to the end user at a hugely inflated price The use of sophisticated global media techniques alongside a range of creative marketing activities are the lynchpins of this process Applying his observations on economic history and the development and impact of global marketing Anholt presents a cogent plan for developing nations to benefit from globalization So long the helpless victim of capitalist trading systems he shows that they can cross the divide and graduate from supplier nation to producer nation Branding native produce on a global scale making a commercial virtue out of perceived authenticity and otherness and fully capitalising on the last mile benefits are key to this graduation and fundamental to forging a new global economic balance Anholt argues with a forceful logic but also backs his hypothesis with enticing glimpses of this process actually beginning to take place Examining activities in India Thailand Russia and Africa among others he shows the risks challenges and pressures inherent in turning the tide but above all he demonstrates the very real possibility of enlightened capitalism working as a force for good in global terms

Skills, Not Just Diplomas Lars Sondergaard, 2012 Future growth in the countries in Eastern Europe and Central Asia ECA will increasingly depend on innovation And innovation requires skills This makes it important as countries plan for recovery to undertake reforms to reduce the skills shortages that the previous growth episode exposed Education systems have a very important role to play in creating the right skills But education systems in the region fall short of the demands of their economies in two major ways The first is that despite high levels of enrollment they do not produce enough graduates with the right skills Students graduate with diplomas not with skills because the quality of the education for many students is poor In large part this is because education systems remain focused on providing an excellent education to a few at the expense of improving the quality of learning for the majority Moreover the systems are still making the transition from teaching the basics to inculcating higher order skills such as critical thinking and problem solving The second way in which education systems fall short is that outside of a few countries in the EU there are few opportunities for adults to retrain or acquire new skills This book argues that generating more of the right skills requires a fundamental change of approach in the education systems in the region so that they aim for and deliver higher quality education for the vast majority of students not just diplomas but skills To start with education systems need to turn the lights on and take seriously the measurement of what students actually learn as opposed to measurement of the inputs into the education process on the implicit assumption that learning follows Policy makers also need to move away from the focus on inputs and processes and increase the emphasis on incentives
